[From the Loui ville Journal ] The Execution of Sue Munday.

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE PRINCIPER Sue Munday was ignorant of his fate until yesterday morning. Rev. Mr. Talbot, of St. John's Episcopal Church, was his spiritual ad-visor. When he saked Stor if he knew what would be done with him, he said he thought he would be executed, as the court martial re-fused to have him introduce witnesses. The fused to have him introduce witnesses. The minister then asked him if he bad any idea when his execution would take place. He replied, "In a few weeks." The minister than told him it would be earlier than that, "in a few days." Rev. Mr. T, then informed him that his execution would take place in a few hours. He was under the impression that he would be shut, but when he was told that he would be hung, he manifested a little uneasiness by a sigh and uttring "Oh!" After the first tidings of his fate he was very calm and collected. When he fully realized his condicollected. When he fully realized his condi-tion, he knelt with his minister in prayer, and tion, he knelt with his minister in prayer, and the crowd—the lowered his beau and increased bim to pray with him. After its struction and confession of faith in the borns were quite formidable, and the argument he presented was somewhat pointed, ordinance was administered an hour before Some of the advance skirmishers drew revolutions.

The Louisville Journal and done him great injustice. He positively declared that he was not present at all when those negro soldiers were killed near Simpsonville, but was far from the scene, and wounded at the time. He also denies being present when Kalfas and Roberts were killed, and said that it was thought that a bloody fight was going it was Marion and his man who did it. He on between a mobit was Marion and his men who did it. He stated that he held a captain's commission from Colonel Jack Allen, and was a confederate soldier. He requested Mr. Taibot that his body should be sent to his aunt, in Frank-lin, Kentucky, and be buried by the side of his.

It required several minutes to form the troops in proper order, the prisoner, in the meantime, remaining in the carriage, his lips moving, as if in prayer, a white handkerchief up to his eyes, and his head leaning against the side of the carriage.

"Count—But you published it to the world to years since, and have recently rapublished at it and praised it. "Greeley—It has not been republished; no, not republished."

THE EXECUTION.

Captain George Swope, of the Fifth Indiana Cavalry, and Provost Marshal, had charge of the execution. The prisoner was conducted to the gallows in company with the minister. Both huelt and offered up a prayer, after which Captain Swope read the charges and specifications to the prisoner. He seemed to pay little attention to this. His eyes were half closed, and his lips continually in motion, avidently offering up his last petition to food. "Lord have mercy upon my poor-sool," seemed, from the motion of his lips, to be his prayer. He was asked if he had anything to say, to make it known. He directed his remarks to his spiritual adviser, in a very low votce, hardly audible.

"I am a regular Confederate soldier, and have acreed in the Confederate army four years." However, and except the sale of up and educate their most healtful daughters for the slave veers the sale of men, women and children, and even the sale of women for prostitution.

AN EXCITING SCENE. Before the prisoner was cut down from the gallows, the crowd began to disperse, and Broadway was soon jammed with a living, floating mass. Onward flowed the stream, and as the head of the disordered column ar and at the head of the disordered column arrived opposite the military prison, a furious buil took a firm stand in the middle of the street, and stabbornly disputed the pissage of the crowd. He lowered his head and threatbis execution, after he had declared that he had no malice against any one, and loved every hold. He then requested Mr Talbot to write letters to his sister, aunt, cousin, and a young lady of this State, having a lock of his hair cut off and placed in each letter.

He declared that he was not guilty of one lent to fit the body goading him to further unalwess. The crowd became dense more tapid and wild. The bull would make for an individualist the second place of the body goading him to further unalwess.
